

What is claimed is:

1. A method for scoring a competition between a first team and a second team, in which one of the first team and the second team is the better scoring team and the other is the lower scoring team, the method comprising:

- 5        a. determining the raw score accumulated by the first team according to the rules of the competition;
- b. determining the raw score accumulated by the second team according to the rules of the competition;
- c. comparing the score accumulated by the first team to the score accumulated by the second team to determine which team is the better scoring team; and
- 10      d. computing the final score of the better scoring team by adding the raw score of the better scoring team to two times the score of the lower scoring team.

15